An asymmetrical monopusher based on a military ordnance timepiece that never went to production, it maintains the vintage military air that made the M100 a success but steps away from the Dirty Dozen formula. I prefer the manual version myself, but it also comes in an automatic. Either way the monopusher is a joy to use.

She slides to seated position and uses Low Fighting or Ground Fighting to throw a sweeping kick to guard two. He crit fails his defense roll, rolls an 8, and knocks himself out.

Doxa was perhaps one of the greatest tragedies of the quartz crisis, a diving brand that before the advent of battery-powered watches was up there with the tool timepiece greats. Despite starting 130 years ago, it's only in the past decade that Doxa has really made their presence felt again – and less than that since they began making inroads here in the UK among anyone but devoted vintage collectors.

As for what the future holds, expect to see a physical store for the previously word-of-mouth brand soon. Rumour has it that space will be on Chiltern Street, London (near the culinary mediocre Firehouse) and will have a pool table. Watches too, of course, but I'm in it for the pool table.

This math is basic, junior high level stuff. And, it's going to give us the most important, but very crude, number we need to understand all this second wave nonsense: the approximate HIT already attained by state and by the United States.

The heat source, whatever it is, needs to have been warmed up and you should have water and food at the ready. Take the chicks from the incubator and transfer them into the brooder.

We're not talking French name, Swiss watches either; while most of the components are indeed third party, Baltic's timepieces are assembled in their own workshop near Besançon. If you're not a Francophile however, there's still plenty to love.

MAFS' Mark Scrivens brutally DUMPS a sobbing Ning

The strange metallic object was said to be a small golden ring, with a watch face on its front, approximately two millimeters thick. Tiny hands on the watch showed time had frozen at 10:06. Most astonishing of all, the back of the diminutive watch was said to have the word "Swiss" or "Switzerland" written in English.

This decision-making system and strategies are a crucial part of this phase. For instance, if we identify a particular file as being 100% malicious, there should be an action to wipe it out. If the file contains partially malicious code, only that piece should be removed. Each scenario should have a specific process.

I would say within reason, but it goes a little beyond reasonable. Only algebra knows how many choices you have. Now all they need to do is add a couple of other types of watch and they'll be unstoppable.

RhymeZone: door rhymes

Why did we stop going to work and church and public parks and beaches? Why did we insist that healthy persons "stay at home" – rather than observing the evidence-based, medically prudent method of identifying those who were sick and isolating them from the rest of the population – advising the sick to "stay at home" and allowing the rest of society to function normally? And, while we witnessed the gatherings of protestors in recent days with little concerns for COVID-19 spread among these asymptomatic persons, most certainly many are hoping that the increasing "case" numbers for COVID-19 will discourage folks from coming to any more rallies for certain candidates for political office.

First a metal dial blank is cut by hand; then it's "counter-enamelled" to stop it bending in the oven. A thin layer of coloured enamel powder is then painted across, before the dial gets fired in an 830°C kiln. This is repeated over and over again until the right depth of colour comes out, with each firing another chance for imperfections that will send the whole process back to the start.

Though they began as a Kickstarter success story back in 2021, the aesthetic basis for Baltic comes from the step-cases watches of the 1940s – a vintage throwback that can be seen in their first two pieces, the Bicompax 001 chronograph and HMS 001. For my money though it's all about their latest release: the Aquascaphe tool watch.

For ecommerce websites, it's critical to do everything in your power to ensure that cardholder data passes from the browser to the web server by being properly encrypted via HTTPS. It should also be stored on the server securely and similarly encrypted when transmitted to any third-party payment processing services.

Most of their models are on the sporty side of things, from the Aqua Compressor to the Chronograph Sport, but they're a damn sight more interesting than your usual array of tool watches. The Chronograph Automatics for example is, as the name suggests, a solid automatic chronograph, but the Cobb version is drenched in six or seven different aqua shades with flashes of red and yellow like an ocean-themed colouring book.

They have however hit the zeitgeist on the head with their funky retro divers, harking right back to the 1960s and the golden era of underwater exploration. That means big, lozenge-shaped cases and the technical look of old scuba gear.

Yes, you'll have heard plenty about Vertex in the past couple of years but until recently I'd have hesitated to call them a brand as such. I never would until they release at least a second watch (that's not just a black version of the original). Fortunately, the new MP45 knocks it out of the park.

The pick-proof lock of the instant invention exploits a directional-control and time-delay interlock mounted inside a conventional pin- or disk-tumbler lock. The interlock comprises a rotatable pawl and an indentation in a cam surface on the rotatable core of the lock which when engaged sets a special rotational locking engagement between the core and the shell (the lock's stationary housing). The core is prevented from rotating in a second unlock direction but is free to rotate in a first direction opposite to the second direction when the proper key is first inserted. The interlock can be deactivated to uncouple the core from the shell by rotating the core in the first direction or when the core is rotated toward the key-inserting orientation in the second direction.

If the core rotates in the second direction past the key-inserting orientation within this preset time interval, the core is free to rotate further to unlock the lock. However, if an improper key or no key is used as in the case of lock picking, the core rotation in the second direction will be interrupted by the lock's spring-loaded tumblers at the key-inserting position and the core will not be able to pass this position within the preset time interval. The interlock then again engages the shell and rotation of the core in the second direction is prevented until the core is again rotated in the first direction. Therefore, the lock-picking motion will never be able to pass the key-inserting orientation, and therefore, the conventional lock-picking method will not be able to rotate the core to an unlocked position.

News analysts then use these numbers to justify criticisms of those who dare to reject the CDC's recommendations with regards to mask wearing and social distancing. It is imperative that all Americans - and especially those in the medical profession - understand the actual definition of a "case" of COVID -19 so as to make informed decisions as to how to live our lives.

The expected total mortality burden of COVID-19 is directly related to the IFR. Moreover, justification for various non-pharmacological public health interventions depends crucially on the IFR.

My own feeling is that it will probably stop because of herd immunity. COVID is serious, it's at least a serious flu.

This process should also include arranging time to speak with your security vendor on how to improve areas of weakness. They are better equipped to offer insight into what can be done.

If you don't pay the religious attention to the watch industry that I do, you could be excused for assuming it's pretty static. There are the big brands like Vacheron, Breguet, Patek, the giant that is Rolex and the various unchanging tiers of timepieces. However, things weren't always this way and in the future they might not be again.

The above illustrations are simply examples of a directional-control and time-delay interlock and a modified pin and disk tumbler. There are many mechanisms and structures that can be used to construct the interlock. There are also many ways to modify the pin or disk tumblers.

They were resurrected back in 2021 and straight out of the gate used the Jaws watch as their inspiration for the Nautoscaph. Since then they've stayed in the same waters, with sharp retro designs based off, but not imitating, their vintage pieces. Except, that is, for the Nautoscaph Superautomatic, a play-by-play re-creation of the actual Jaws watch.

In some cases, there is no sign that a backdoor has been installed, waiting to be accessed by the attacker for malicious activities. Therefore, it's highly recommended to implement mechanisms to ensure the integrity of your file system.

You've definitely seen an Alsta before, even if you couldn't put a name to the watch. At least, if you're any kind of cinephile. They might be a tiny brand nowadays, but back in their 1970's heyday - before the quartz crisis took them under - Alsta was one of the go-to names for professional diving watches, so much so that they had a starring role alongside Richard Dreyfuss' Matt Hooper in Jaws.

My patients who insist upon wearing masks, gloves and social distancing are citing these misleading statistics as justification for their decisions (and, of course, that they are following the 'CDC guidelines'). I simply advise them, 'COVID-19 is NOT in the atmosphere around us; it resides in the respiratory tracts of infected individuals and can only be transmitted to others by sick, infected persons after prolonged contact with others'.

Here's how I break down the action, with my initial impressions of what happens. I will break down the bits into scenes, each described in detail later on. Those sections are referenced in bold. While suggestions are made for mechanics in my notes on the clip, I may revisit them in the details, so withhold judgement until the end!

Finally, there is a lack of background evidence surrounding the entire episode. Though the story has been reported and widely circulated by media outlets, there seems to be little information on the background of the archaeologists and journalists involved in the story. It has never been revealed which tomb in particular was being excavated, by whom, nor any additional information on the coffin itself.

As Panerai gets ever pricier for, let's be perfectly honest, not much change in quality, Anonimo is becoming an ever-better option for the same kind of watch. They're also a little less invested in pleasing only the Paneristi, with some much wackier, riskier designs. Anonimo might not be new, but they should definitely be up and coming.
