The Best New Artist curse may have subsided in recent years (Alicia Keys, John Legend, Maroon 5, Carrie Underwood and Adele all have tremendous careers), while the jury is still out on Fun, Macklemore and Sam Smith (to say nothing of the dormant Bon Iver). This year's contenders are all solo artists (and all eminently spoonerizable): Courtney Barnett, James Bay, Sam Hunt, Tori Kelly, and Meghan Trainor. Trainor seems like the favorite; she already has a Record of the Year nomination under her belt for "All About That Bass," though this is her only nomination this year. James Bay is up for two awards in the Rock category, and if he can somehow win one or two of those awards, it could bode well for him with Best New Artist. Courtney Barnett is probably the sentimental favorite for many of The Current's listeners, though as with HAIM last year, the mere fact that she's nominated is a thrillingly ecstatic triumph that only goes to show that her star continues to rise.

On March 25, 1942, in Memphis, Tenn, the one and only Queen of Soul was born, gifting the world with her soon-to-be rhythm and blues, gospel and jazz magic. Between 1967 and 1974, she recorded several soul and pop hits, including "Respect," which topped the pop and R&B charts in the spring of '67, "Chain of Fools," "(You Make Me Feel Like) A Natural Woman," and more. Named "the greatest singer of all time" by Rolling Stone in 2021, Franklin influenced some of the greatest singers ever—from Whitney Houston to Mary J. Blige and Alicia Keys. She won 18 Grammys, including a Lifetime Achievement Award, and was the first woman inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. In 2021, she was inducted into the GMA Gospel Music Hall of Fame.

Alicia Keys has been keeping busy since the release of her fifth studio album Girl On Fire. She recently sat down with Letterman to talk about her son Egypt and Santa, as well as touring with a 2-year old for the first time. Letterman still has that cranky late night host swag, making sly compliments on her fiery dress right before the girl on fire sits down to perform "Brand New Me" live. Watch below and also check her performance of "Brand New Me" for The View rocking a feathered 'do, Olivia Newton John style. Lastly, watch the brand new (ish) video for "Brand New Me" (where she rocks more of Jennifer Beal in Flashdance style) after the jump.

In the canon of collective pop culture consciousness, there is only one moment from the 2009 VMAs that anyone remembers. And that's Kanye West taking the mic from a young Taylor Swift, giving his now-infamous "Imma let you finish" tirade. It's a moment that would ignite a bitter, years long feud that would have ripple effects throughout the next decade of popular culture. But what we are here to reminisce about today is the deeper cut interruption of the night: when Lil Mama was feeling Alicia Keys and Jay-Z's rendition of "New York State of Mind" so goddamn hard she just absolutely couldn't help getting up on that stage herself and rocking out with them. It's a moment that with the hindsight of more than a decade is an entirely harmless and even fun moment of pop culture history. And it's also one that feels so rare in 2021—a year of pre-recorded Zoom events that lack in any sort of spontaneity. Now is the time to relive, and cherish, Lil Mama's energy in 2009. What we all wouldn't give today to feel something as hard as what she felt that night.

One of the greatest rock bands of all time, U2 took to the MTV EMA stage for a fourth time with a poignant, understated rendition of 'Every Breaking Wave', accompanied by a strings section. Alicia Keys serenaded the crowd from the nearby viewing party at the O2 Academy Glasgow, with an inspired performance of her Best Song with a Message-nominated track 'We Are Here' being beamed into the SSE Hydro and to MTV EMA viewers the world over. Best Song and Best Female winner Ariana Grande flew over the audience in a perspex bubble chair, treating fans to a Barbarella-esque medley of her smash hits 'Problem' and 'Break Free', and Ed Sheeran brought his chart-topping track 'Thinking Out Loud' to life, lighting up the stage with an elaborate music box.

Surely the most rock'n'roll thing to do would have been to put them out

Snoop continued: "With an unapologetic voice, Pac embraced those contradictions that proved we ain't just a character out of someone else's story book. To be human is to be many things at once.

The picture for her fifth studio album shows Alicia rocking a sleek haircut and striking a confident pose — she means serious business. In June, Keys gave the public a taste of her new musical direction with the song, "New Day", an up-tempo track that was propelled by heavy drums. It was something that most of us are not used to hearing from Alicia, and that's exactly the way that she wants it.

In Atlanta, Georgia on June 8, 1977, Kanye Omari West was born. The singer, songwriter, rapper, fashion designer, record producer, and entrepreneur first became known as a record producer for Rock-A-Fella records in the early 2000's. He produced records for Jay-Z, Alicia Keys and Ludacris, along with many other notable artists.

The song finds Keys in the midst of a confusing romance with her lover, to which she finds herself constantly second guessing herself, and wondering out loud if their love will survive the constant changes it undergoes. I love how lyrically Alicia uses the word fallen to refer to both the high points and low points of the relationship, with the highs seeing her fall in love with her boyfriend, and the lows finding her falling out of love. Conversely, such lyrical prowess showcases a woman who possessed thought processes that were far beyond her 20 years, while simultaneously maintaining the essence of young love. This first single from Minor reached number one on Billboard's Hot 100 chart, and earned Keys numerous awards, including three Grammy Awards, most notably, Song of the Year in 2002. Kid Rock/ Tommy Lee: Given that the 2007 VMAs took place in Las Vegas, it seems appropriate that Rock and Lee decided to act like a pair of aging heavyweights, duking it out on the floor of the Palms Resort & Casino while Alicia Keys performed onstage. Reportedly, Rock sucker-punched Lee over some "disrespectful" e-mails Lee had sent from Pamela Anderson's BlackBerry (both men had relationships with Anderson), resulting in a table-tipping tussle that ended with both men being escorted from the casino. Criss Angel, who was sitting with Lee, was also ejected, though one presumes he used his magic to re-enter the building undetected.
